Manuscripts of high quality dealing with any aspect of natural history will be considered for publication in one of the Illinois Natural History Survey series: Bulletin, Biological Notes, Circular, and Special Publication. Authors who are not employees of the Survey are required to pay printing costs. Manuscripts should follow the recommendations of the third edition of the Council of Biology Editors Style Manual except that journal names in the literature cited are to be spelled in full. The Survey expects to publish only one or two manuscripts by non-Survey authors yearly.

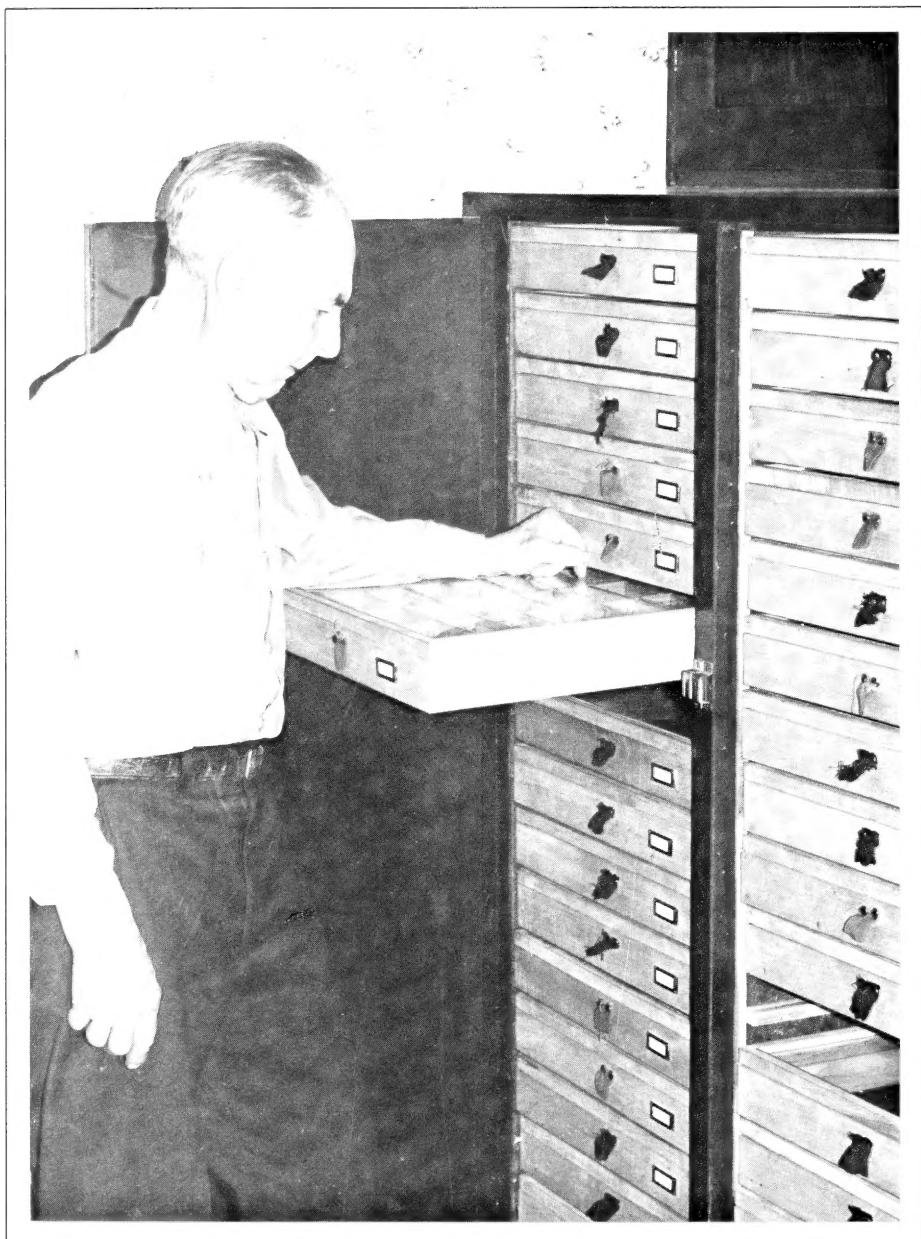

Send three copies of manuscripts to be considered for publication to Office of the Chief, Illinois Natural History Survey, 607 East Peabody Drive, Champaign, Illinois 61820.

Murray O. Glenn (October 3, 1893–July 26, 1981) reminisces about his collecting experiences in his study at his home in Henry, Illinois, on the day his moth collection was transported to the Illinois Natural History Survey, March 21, 1977.

THIS paper reports the faunal, phenological, and host plant data associated with a collection of about 30,000 microlepidoptera representing 954 species. Collected by the late Murray O. Glenn between 1927 and 1976 in Marshall and Putnam counties, Illinois, and donated to the Illinois Natural History Survey in 1977, this collection may represent the most complete and significant assemblage of midwestern microlepidoptera in existence (Godfrey 1978). It is rivaled perhaps only by that of the late Annette F. Braun, Cincinnati, Ohio, a collection that now resides in The Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (R.W. Hodges, pers. comm.), except for a synoptic set of specimens given to the University of Louisville (C.V. Covell, Jr., pers. comm.). A substantial amount of Glenn material is also preserved in the United States National Museum of Natural History at the Smithsonian Institution. Glenn's persistent collecting activities, coupled with his careful labeling and preparation techniques, resulted in valuable data that have application to current and future ecological and systematic research and to inventorying natural resources of Illinois. This information, therefore, is made available here to aid investigators in these and related disciplines.

The meaning of the term "microlepidoptera" is based more on traditional usage than on biological meaning. Various authors, including Forbes (1923) and McDunnough (1939), employed the term almost casually as a category for certain lepidopterous superfamilies that, with some exceptions, characteristically include moths with wingspans of about 5–25

Dr. G.L. Godfrey is an Associate Insect Taxonomist, Illinois Natural History Survey, Champaign, and Dr. E.D. Cashatt is an Associate Curator of Zoology, Illinois State Museum, Springfield. Mr. M.O. Glenn was a farmer who lived in Putnam County, Illinois. Glenn began collaborating in the writing of this publication, but unfortunately he died on July 26, 1981. Consequently, the responsibility for interpreting the data in his collection and completing the manuscript was entirely assumed by the first two authors. Because of the importance of Glenn's prior efforts, however, he is considered to be one of the authors. Direct references to him and to his contributions are intentional and will help the reader ascertain and appreciate those contributions. Irwin's (1983) obituary of Glenn may be consulted for details about Glenn's avocation and life.

mm as opposed to macrolepidoptera, a category composed principally of larger species. It was within this traditional framework that Glenn pursued his interests. More recent treatments of the higher classification of the Lepidoptera cited and followed by Hodges et al. (1983) place no significance on the terms microlepidoptera and macrolepidoptera but emphasize instead the subordinal taxa of Zeugloptera, Dacnonypha, Exoporia, Monotrysia, and Ditrysia. Thus, references to microlepidoptera in this report apply to the Dacnonypha and the Monotrysia and to the smaller Ditrysia. (Glenn collected no representatives of Zeugloptera or Exoporia.)

Many microlepidoptera are concealed feeders and exhibit a variety of feeding habits, including leaf mining, tieing, and rolling; gall making; and stem, root, and wood boring. Certain species feed on or in fruiting structures; others feed on dead plant or animal matter. Some of the economically important species in the present paper include Sitotroga cerealella (Olivier) (Angoumois grain moth) (Gelechiidae); Depressaria pastinacella (Duponchel) (parsnip webworm) (Oecophoridae); Thyridopteryx ephemeraeformis (Haworth) (evergreen bagworm) (Psychidae); Synanthedon exitiosa (Say) (peach tree borer) (Sesiidae); Tinea pellionella Linnaeus (casemaking clothes moth) and Tineola bisselliella (Hummel) (webbing clothes moth) (Tineidae); Choristoneura fumiferana (Clemens) (spruce budworm) and Cydia pomonella (Linnaeus) (codling moth) (Tortricidae); and Anagasta kuehniella (Zeller) (Mediterranean flour moth), Crambus agitatellus Clemens (grass webworm), Ostrinia nubilalis (Hübner) (European corn borer), Plodia interpunctella (Hübner) (Indian meal moth), and Pyralis farinalis Linnaeus (meal moth) (Pyralidae).

Collection Area

Based on his specimen labels, Glenn simply designated the collecting locality as "Putnam Co." Actually, the geographical area (Figure 1) in which he concentrated his activities is delimited southward by Sandy Creek from Magnolia (sec. 35, T. 31 N., R. 1 W., Magnolia Twp., Putnam Co.) to the Illinois River (11.4 km) and extends about 6.5 km northward to a swamp (W½ sec. 23, T. 31 N., R. 2 W., Magnolia Twp., Putnam Co.) through which Clear Creek flows above

Sawmill Lake and to the County School (NW $\frac{1}{4}$ SW $\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 15, T. 31 N., R. 1 W., Magnolia Twp., Putnam Co.). The town of Henry, located immediately west of the Illinois River, also is included in this report because Glenn lived there after retiring from farming in 1951 and collected around his home (NE $\frac{1}{4}$ NW $\frac{1}{4}$ SW $\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 16, T. 13 N., R. 10 E., Henry Twp., Marshall Co.) when conditions did not permit him to venture east. This defined area encompasses parts of Marshall and Putnam counties. Glenn's farmhouse was situated in Putnam County (SE $\frac{1}{4}$ NE $\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 31, T. 31 N., R. 1 W., Magnolia Twp.) about midway between Magnolia and Henry, but his farmland, especially the most wooded parts of it (Figures 2, 3, and 4), overlapped into adjacent Marshall County. Thus, even on his own property, he worked both counties and took advantage of the area's diverse habitats, including wooded hollows, stream margins, prairie patches, and manmade disturbances, especially farmland and the abandoned Rutland, Toluca, and Northern Railroad right-of-way (Figure 5).

The collection area falls within two of the natural divisions of Illinois recognized by Schwegman et. al (1973): the Illinois River Section of the Upper Mississippi River and Illinois River Division and the Grand Prairie Section of the Grand Prairie Division. The suturing of the area's prairie (albeit remnant), deciduous woodland (increasingly remnant), and riparian ecosystems and their combined plant communities (see Index of Larval Hosts for a partial list of the area's plant species) may help to account for the large number of species of microlepidoptera in the area. Also of importance is the small rise in elevation from Sandy Creek and the Illinois River to the former prairie area north and east of these streams. The lowest point is 134 m (normal pool level of the Illinois River) and the highest is 212 m at a point 5.9 km east of the Illinois River. At numerous points along the hills bordering Sandy Creek and the Illinois River, however, the elevation may rise from 137 to 198 m within 0.6 km. These are the sites of wooded hollows with either intermittent or permanent streams.

Glenn collected 15 previously undescribed species, which have subsequently been described by other workers (Clarke 1941, 1947, 1953; Hodges 1962a, 1962b, 1964, 1966, 1969, 1986; Cashatt 1972). These are shown in Figure 6. Because "Putnam Co." is the type-locality for each of these species, we attempted to define more precisely his principal collecting sites. Three sites were determined on and adjacent to his farm: Big Hollow ( $E\frac{1}{2}NW\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 6, T. 30 N., R. 1 W., Roberts Twp., Marshall Co.), the farm pond ( $NE\frac{1}{4}NW\frac{1}{4}NW\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 6, T. 30 N., R. 1 W., Roberts Twp., Marshall Co.), and a short segment of the abandoned Henry Branch of the now defunct Rutland, Toluca, and Northern Railroad immediately west of Broaddus Station (intersection of Marshall County roads 1170N and 1960E) near Sandy Creek ( $NW\frac{1}{4}NW\frac{1}{4}SE\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 6, T. 30 N., R. 1 W., Roberts Twp., Marshall Co.). Abandonment of the railroad occurred about 1919 (Irwin 1985). Collecting sites identified within the southwestern part of the area are the lower portion of Wolf Hollow east of the north junction of State highways 18 and 26 (formerly 87) ( $SE\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 34, T. 31 N., R. 2 W., Magnolia Twp., Putnam Co.) and a site on an unpaved road ( $E\frac{1}{2}NW\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 3, T. 30 N., R. 2 W., Hopewell Twp., Marshall Co.) just southeast of a gravelly bluff ( $N\frac{1}{2}NW\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 3, T. 30 N., R. 2 W., Hopewell Twp., Marshall Co.) about 0.5 km south of the same junction. The gravelly bluff may be the site that Glenn mentioned to Wyatt (Wyatt 1953). Northward, George Park Memorial Woods near the upper reaches of Poole Creek ( $W\frac{1}{2}SW\frac{1}{4}$  sec. 25, T. 31 N., R. 2 W., Magnolia Twp., Putnam Co.) and the swampy area along the lower end of Clear Creek in the Illinois River Valley (3.2 km NE and 4.2 km NNE, respectively, from the aforementioned highway intersection) are important. Information on these collecting areas, all shown in Figure 1, came from Glenn's family members, his colleagues, and Glenn himself.

Collecting Techniques

Glenn built his collection from moths captured at night or during the day and from moths reared from caterpillars and pupae found in the field. The curiosity about plant-caterpillar-moth associations that led him into his 50-year avocation developed during the Great Depression when he, in his own words, "didn't have anything to do." He began collecting moths at lighted surfaces (especially collecting sheets and windows) during the evening and moths that he spotted and chased during the day to supplement his series. Until the late 1950s he used pressurized gas lamps at night to attract moths to his portable collecting sheet; subsequently, he switched to a 15-watt fluorescent, ultraviolet lamp. With few exceptions, the specimen labels do not indicate where within the collecting area ("Putnam Co.") specimens were taken or the hour of their capture.

Structure of the Checklist

Although Glenn followed McDunnough's checklist (1939), the zoological nomenclature used here has been adjusted to accord to Hodges et al. (1983) and to certain additional papers (Brown and Miller 1983; Miller 1983a, 1983b, 1985a, 1985b, 1987; Hodges 1986). Names at each hierarchical level (family, genus, and species), however, have been alphabetized as an aid to nonspecialists rather than listed in the "phylogenetic"-numerical sequence followed by Hodges et al.

Within species accounts, information is divided into two categories: data pertaining to field-collected moths and data pertaining to reared moths. Readers may assume that dates without other notations indicate when moths were collected in the field. Dates for reared specimens are those when moths issued from the pupal stage.

Because Glenn gave numerous specimens to individuals and to institutions during his many years of collection, we are unable to indicate the relative abundance of a given species on any particular date. We have, therefore, intentionally omitted the number of specimens per species collected or reared on a particular date. When, however, a species was collected on the same day of the month in different years, we have included the years parenthetically because that information may be useful in establishing seasonal flight peaks. Neither time nor resources permitted us to determine all the recipients of Glenn's material and to include that data in this account.

Host information often helps to identify microlepidoptera (Forbes 1923; MacKay 1959, 1962, 1968; Neunzig 1972) and to understand their systematic relationships (Clarke 1952; Powell 1980); therefore, all such data from Glenn's rearings are included. Glenn used common and scientific names for host plants but neither with consistency. Therefore, if he used only a vernacular name, we have listed it first, followed by the scientific name in brackets. When the genus or genus and species are listed first, readers may assume that this information was recorded by Glenn. Fernald's (1950) nomenclature was used for the formal names of host plants.

Users of the checklist should note that it is not necessarily a complete accounting of all microlepidoptera that may occur in Marshall and Putnam counties. Additional rearings and such collecting techniques as the use of pheromone traps for the Sesiidae and mercury vapor lamps undoubtedly would yield species that Glenn missed. R.W. Hodges (pers. comm.) stated that undescribed species are among the more than 10,000 unidentified specimens that Glenn gave to the United States National Museum of Natural History in 1977.

Acknowledgments

The family of Murray O. Glenn—especially Marjorie E. Haws, Magnolia, Illinois, and Donald Glenn, McNabb, Illinois—graciously provided information on his collecting activities and warmly hosted us on our visits to the Glenn farm. Another important source, historically and personally, was Roderick R. Irwin, Research Affiliate at the Illinois Natural History Survey (INHS) and Honorary Curator of Lepidoptera, Illinois State Museum (ISM), who received his early tutoring in lepidopterology from M.O. Glenn. J.F. Gates Clarke and Donald R. Davis of the United States National Museum of Natural History (USNM) and August Busck (deceased), Carl Heinrich (deceased), and Ronald W. Hodges of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) were the principal specialists who aided Glenn during the most active years of the collection's development.

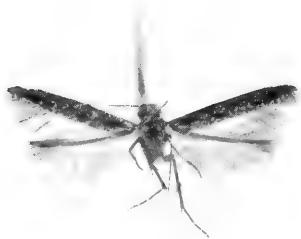

Several colleagues, including Richard L. Brown, Mississippi State University; D.R. Davis, USNM; R.W. Hodges, Systematic Entomology Laboratory (USDA); Jean-François Landry, Biosystematics Research Centre, Agriculture Canada; William E. Miller, University of Minnesota; Herbert H. Neunzig, North Carolina State University; and Jerry A. Powell, University of California (Berkeley), aided us by correcting certain species identifications and/or advising us on portions of various drafts of the manuscript and on nomenclatural problems. Steven Passoa, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, brought additional problems requiring corrections to our attention and Charles V. Covell, Jr., University of Louisville, kindly provided clarifying information. James E. King (ISM), Kenneth R. Robertson (INHS), and David J. Voegtlind (INHS) reviewed the manuscript and offered constructive comments during its final phase.

We thank Molly Hardin Scott (INHS) and Marlin Roose (ISM) for their photographic assistance and Lloyd Le Mere, Gail Herendeen, and John Sherrod (INHS) for help with the illustrations. Mary Lou Williamson's patience and wordprocessing skills are much appreciated as are the editorial efforts of the Office of Communication (INHS), especially those of Audrey S. Hodgins. Finally, we are indebted to J.F.G. Clarke and W.E. Miller for carefully reviewing the entire checklist at the request of the INHS Publication Committee. Their suggestions greatly helped us prepare our final draft.

30. SCYTHRIDIDAE

Entries for the Scythrididae include data from material that Glenn deposited in the USNM (courtesy of J.-F. Landry) and at the INHS.

SCYTHRIS Hübner

S. basilaris (Zeller): June 2, 7(1941, 1964), 13, 14, 16, 19(1944, 1949), 20(1937, 1963); July 1.

S. graminivorella (Braun): June 16, 26, 27, 30.

S. impositella (Zeller): May 22; June 7, 11, 12; August 24, 25.

S. limbella (Fabricius): May 20, 22, 25, 26; June 2, 9; July 1, 7, 12, 14, 16, 17, 25, 28, 30; August 2, 10, 11, 13, 17(1970, 1973), 20, 26, 29, 31. Notes. J.-F. Landry in a letter (September 9, 1986) to S. Passoa stated that this is a European species apparently introduced into eastern North America in the 1950s. S. limbella was first collected in the Marshall-Putnam county area on July 16, 1967.

S. matutella (Clemens): May 5, 14, 24; June 1, 4, 11(1956, 1966); July 1, 22, 25–27, 29; August 4, 6(1964, 1969, 1970), 7–9, 10(1970, 1973), 13, 15(1967, 1975), 18(1969, 1972), 22, 29. Reared: Aster sp.; issued March 8 (reared indoors). Notes. Landry (pers. comm.) stated that the Aster-association is "quite surprising because the usual hostplant is Helianthus. Asters are the usual host of the related impositella. Either matutella uses hostplants other than sunflowers, or the specimen was mislabelled. . . ."

S. trivinctella (Zeller): May 18, 19, 23, 30; June 10, 11, 20, 30; July 5, 25; August 3, 9, 20, 29; September 5, 18; October 3, 12, 18; November 30.

S. undescribed sp. near eboracensis (Zeller): June 3, 4, 6, 14, 22.
